PRESS RELEASE

Coruscant is raising EUR 2,5 millions to carry on with its international development

Coruscant, an Independent Power Producer, dedicated to solar energy, announced a capital increase of EUR 2,5 millions. EUR 1,5 million was invested by Coruscant historical partners (a pool of individual investors and Eco-Mobilité Partenaires, French national railway corporate fund) and EUR 1 million by Oséo, through a Participative Development Contract.

Coruscant's shareholders and partners demonstrate their confidence into the company's business model and their support of its international strategy.

Coruscant is a privately owned company, offering integrated solutions to design, finance, build and operate photovoltaic car parks coverage. The company has already installed a capacity of 7 MWp in France and develops now its know-how abroad. In 2011, Coruscant has built the first photovoltaic power plant of South Africa with a capacity of 400 kWp.

The company has a strong development plan in the "sunbelt" countries, particularly around the Mediterranean Sea and in the Middle East. These new funds will enable Coruscant to materialize its new projects in a short term.

"Our shareholders and partners give us a demonstration of trust and the means to reach our international ambitions. Our solar photovoltaic car parks don't use extra lands, have no impact on the environment and allow vehicles to be protected from the sun. Coruscant perfectly illustrates French SME's exportation potential on the world solar energy market, where in a lot of countries, the photovoltaic electricity is already competitive compared to other means of production", says Thierry Mueth, Coruscant's CEO and President of Enerplan, the French solar energy syndicate.
